

e-Library

e-Library or Digital Library or Online Library or Virtual Library is the one in which collections are stored in digital format as opposed to print, microform or other media with computer access to such collection of information resources in the nature of retrieval system.

The e-resources collection could be subscription based or developed using local information resources or a combination of both. The e-library allows an user to search, retrieve, save and re-use in real time.

An e-Library is a gateway to quality academic resources, such as peer-reviewed articles and selected websites. It also lets you search a number of databases at once, combining and filtering the results so that you spend less time searching for relevant material to support research and study. e-Library allows you to search and display results from a selection of electronic resources all at once and provides.

- Powerful search capabilities, including the ability to search the text of recent, scanned documents using optical character recognition;
- Desk-top access to electronic filings and issuances, scanned documents, and large format maps;
- Several file formats for accessing and downloading documents; and
- The option to request that documents be printed or downloaded at your desktop, or by the contractor in the Public Reference Room.

At MIHTM-CHTM, there are lots of E-Journals, Magazines, Tourism Guides, Tourism Dictionaries etc. are available.
